CAT & Genny Training Course

Who Should Attend The Course:

Our CAT and Genny training courses are suitable for anyone involved in excavation work including excavation operators, utilities personnel and supervisors and managers. No previous experience is necessary although some practical experience of groundwork and excavations would be beneficial.

It provides delegates with the essential knowledge needed to safely and correctly operate a Cable Avoidance Tool (CAT) along with a Signal Generator (GENNY) when tracing underground services to meet the guidance from HSG 47 for Avoiding Danger from Underground Services.

The course involves hands on use of the actual locators to detect and trace the route of buried underground services. This will cover the different types of buried services that exist, current legislation and best practice concerning detecting buried services, the safety implications of not using a locator and associated ancillary equipment, use of local utility plans, observation of evidence in the street etc.

Course Agenda:

When carrying out any excavation work for utility or other purposes, it is important to ensure that all underground services are effectively located and avoided.

This course includes the following:

- The reasons for using locators
- Safety
- Plans
- HSG47
- Range of features available on CATs (inc C-Scope & CAT4)
- The theory of locating services
- Range of modes
- Power
- Radio
- Signal
- AllScan
- Depth measurements
- An outside practical session using a range of equipment

Course Duration:

Half Day (4 Hours)
